Core Competencies

Interpretation

Interpretation consists of the conversion of oral communication from a source language into a target language. There are two main modes of interpretation: consecutive, in which the interpreter waits for the interlocutor to pause before converting the message into the target language, and simultaneous, in which the interpreter converts the message into the target language while the interlocutor is speaking.

Telephonic Interpretation (OPI "Over-the-Phone Interpretation")

This kind of interpretation consists of oral communication being converted from a source language into a target language by a remote interpreter through a telephonic connection to the interlocutors.

Video Remote Interpretation (VRI)

This kind of interpretation consists of oral communication being converted from a source language into a target language by a remote interpreter through an audio-visual connection to the interlocutors.

On-site Interpretation

This kind of interpretation consists of oral communication being converted from a source language into a target language by an interpreter who is physically present in the same location as the interlocutors.

Conference Interpretation

This kind of interpretation is generally done in the simultaneous mode and requires special equipment such as PA systems, transmitters, microphones, sound-proof booths, etc. to facilitate the distribution of oral messages, converted from a source language into a target language by an interpreter, to their intended audience.

Translation

Translation consists of the conversion of written material from a source language into a target language.

Transcription

Transcription consists of the conversion of audio or audio-visual material into a written document. Transcription may be done in the same language (i.e. English-to-English), or it may include a translation component if the source language and the target language are different (i.e. Spanish-to-English).

Subtitling

Subtitling consists of the conversion of the audio portion of a video recording into text, which is then superimposed onto the video recording so that the text is visible to an audience.
